SAN FRANCISCO, CAL, December 3.—The Dumbarton bridge and cut-off over San Francisco Bay, saving fifty miles of travel, will be completed and regular trains will be running over the new route either late in February or ealy in Mach. Such is the pediction of the Southern Pacific's chief engineer, who has had charge of the problem of spanning the lower reach of San Francisco Bay at its narrowest point, in order to save the long trip around the southern arm of the great waterway.

The ultimate intention is to use this route as a main line to bring central overland trains into San Francisco, avoiding ferry transferring at Benecia
